Revenge of the Grin

Click for Calendar

8.8.2020 Stonard to Pinkskin Lands

The Blacktooth Grin called a Council of War. For those that do not know the Grin, they dwell in the Swamps of Sorrow at Stonard and refuse to call Thrall their Warchief. But the humans had attacked their home and revenge was needed!

You can consult them on this matter, but needless to say, it means that not everyone comes to assist when they call. Some members of Redwood and others joined together and rode out immediately for the human lands north of the Swamp.

Much ale and blood was spilled that night.

8.16.2020 Council of War, Stonard

Another council of war was called, Hand of Lordaeron, Clans of Kalimdor, Redwood Tribes, and others now rallied in Stonard. The Seer of Redwood allowed two of his Tribunals, Nby the Warlord and Skybreaker, a Master Pathfinder, to attend while he helped with the defense of the camp and looked after an, "Owlkin" who impressed the Seer with his determination and fearlessness as an assassin, Mue'jin, came to call. Several were attacked, including the Owlkin and Okwaho by the master deathdealer, but none died that night thanks to heroic efforts on the part of the healers on hand. Wura, the Owlkin, found a new home in the Tribes that very night.

*editor's note: This is the same foul assassin who stole the life of Shonte Daud and we will end you!

Aug 19 and Aug 22 Blackrock Orcs Call on Stormwind

"A Day in the Life of the Peon"

The Blackrock Orcs, seeing an opportunity to strike back from the North of Redridge, summoned their trainers to the Valley of Trials and after bonking several peons on the head devoted hours to shaping up the Blackrock Orcs that were hiding (or sleeping in almost 99% of the cases) under the shade of the trees and sipping on Cactus Apple Surprise.

One Blackrock trainer spoke to a reporter on hand and had this to say, "They are frightening. Not in combat. In sheer foolishness. They will die in the assault on Stormwind. I am sure of it. Lok'tar Ogar!"

"The Fires of Blackrock"

The trainees were reluctantly shipped to the front lines, many souls given to the demons that night to power the portals. But, despite being peons, outfitted with some of the finest gear that could be found, the bloodlust upon them was a sight to see as they invaded the nearby Abbey.

Several structures were put to the torch before the pinkskins responded and sent them back to their mountain with cuts and bruises. "Well, they did better than I expected and I suppose we will keep them around to work the forges. But I am tired of hunting for their new secret sleeping spots," commented the wily veteran in charge.

Aug 29 Dragging Dragons

Softened up by the Blackrock attack, Blacktooth Grin went for the Gates of Stormwind with renewed vigor and determination... and a Dragon.

They sent a team to bait a dragon, angering the giant enough that he chased them all the way to Stormwind.

The remainder of the Grin with allies attacked Stormwind with ferocity teaching the pinkskins to stay out of the Swamps for a time.

Now, if we could just keep them from all the Horde lands!

Time Problems

Earthen Ring Escapades Attendees Break Hourglass of Time

7.31.20 - 8.29.20 Various Locations

Recap: Okwáho called everyone together to commence a spirit walk to Ahn'Qiraj itself at the behest of the Earthen Ring. The intent was to observe and collect information from the spirit realm so as not to be in any danger should ancient forces be too powerful. A powerful dragon attacked the spirit walkers and they ended up in the Caverns of Time where the master pathfinders of Redwood, Pogo'pogo and Branharak Skybreaker cracked the Hourglass of Time.

As others returned and met up from the failed journey to the Caverns of Time there began some small indications that things were definitely not right.

The strange tour guide, (A highmountain Runemaster from the Future), from the Caverns of Time, Leidolfr was now a constant figure on the Bluffs.

The Seer reported that the spirit walkers were now reporting issues talking to the Ancestors and he could not walk the pathways of the Dream at all, and he could not see or speak to Leidolfr to help set up a plan to resolve the the other inconsistencies that were occurring.

First was an encounter with a young Troll hunter with a talking Owl at an otherwise normal Redwood Roadhouse in Ratchet. The Seer watched as another Grimtotem found the Tribes, but spent most of his time answering questions about the expedition and the new cuts on his snout.

A short time later, Leidolfr was summoned by the Tribes to answer questions in Thunder Bluff explaining his involvement and help to come up with solutions. Additionally, news was given by the Hand's extraordinary investigate Avers that Zel'wah the Tribes witch doctor was not himself and was working with Trolls in the Hinterlands.

The Chieftain began acting completely out of character, running with rocket boots around the Bluffs disrupting everything.

Leidolfr was not able to gain the trust of many, but he did seem to have a calming affect on the Chieftain and helped Longwalker Ragehorn to return the Chieftain to her tent.

A few days later a combined expedition of Grin, Hand, and the Tribes met in the Hinterlands to try to bring Zel'wah to his senses. What the allies found was that Zel'wah was controlled by the Loa Shadra and had also mind-controlled or taken over somehow the Forsaken paladin, Triffy D'argentine. Winning the battle, the war turned nasty as Shadra was called to rescue her new Priest. Luckily, the summoning of Torcali had already begun and in the battle of Loa versus Loa, Torcali was victorious and his servant Zel'wah returned to his senses.

The Seer continued to meet with many to determine cause and effects of the Hourglass of Time cracking, as well as trying to determine a plan of action.

The Priest Anedrion met with the Seer and spoke about using anti-magic as a possible way to send people back, which he developed after testing the young Leidolfr for magical emanations.

It was Wanokee, a tribesman, who determined to finally lead a group to find the Bronze Dragon Chromie, though many had suggested the idea before then.

Meeting in Brill, they travelled to Andorhal. Leidolfr on hand.

What the group found was a young dragon, Orodormi, who was on hand to catalog events, but no Chromie. Still the young dragon was helpful, though when things went awry, some present were not able to give the Dragon's words any attention. For the powerful warrior Taharkah claimed to see a human present... a human that was in reality the Chieftain Ayashe Brightmane. As Longwalker Ragehorn kept between the two, the imposing Taharkah then saw a naga in place of the human and it was all anyone could do to hold her back. Through it all, Skybreaker, Zel'wah and others stayed with Orodormi and received some much needed advise and knowledge about what it would take to make things right... and to watch out for the Infinite Dragonflight's involvement.

And then there was a Safety Explosives Course taught by Warlord and Safety Inspector Nby. The Seer began to evince safety concerns, especially when rocket boots were given to many present, including the Chieftain, and sure enough there was an accident... It was Nby that was blown up and needed resuscitation by the onlooking healers. However, it was not Nby that finally opened her eyes, it was a shaman from another time stream, Nathera Younghoof. It has been a blessing to have Raush Cloudsong befriend the young shaman while the rest of us try to find a way to get her returned to her reality, where Kaldorei are friends and Forsaken do not exist...

As if losing Tribunal Nby was not demoralizing enough to the Tribes, the Chieftain escaped the watchful eye of the Seer, who had been trying to give the Longwalker some relief. Found in Ratchet, the Tribes watched as a Naga, yes a Naga, took over the Chieftain and drowned Ayashe Brightmane. Luckily, they were able to revive the Chieftain, but suddenly a human priest appeared in the coastal waters alongside. And another Longwalker, Tayen Pondjumper tore up the Goblin port town, killing and raging indiscriminately and had to be subdued by Krip'yup and Skybreaker. And another trusted troll, was taken over, as well, by a proclaimed Blood Troll.

A solution needs to be enacted before more succumb!

For more details and the full story, see the links section below the calendar for access to the Google Document. Will the Tribes and their Allies be able to return all these time-lost victims to their time-streams so the Bronze Dragons can repair the Hourglass of Time? Find out on Sept 9th and 12th for the two part finale of "A Grim and Foreboding Tale".

8.3.2020 Fray Island, The Barrens

And they have been on their honeymoon every since!!!

Tonk Battles with Hand of Lordaeron

A little entertainment with the Darkmoon Faire in town, tonk battling. The Tribes and the Hand took part in an elimination tournament in the beautiful Mulgore plains.

It was a much needed vacation since all had grown weary of the Silithus sands...

Blessing of Krag'wa with Puddlemarsh

Puddlemarsh called upon the Tribes to investigate and stop the destruction occurring in the Stonetalon Mountains. Cleansing the mines of Goblins, destroying the skyship tower, and cleaning the contamination of the lake were accomplished with all haste, and Krag'wa, the Loa of Puddlemarsh, made an appearance and promised some information to be given at a later date to his servant and the Tribes.

Defend the Crossroads

Or Attack Bael'dun Keep

8.26.2020 Anniversary PVP in the Barrens

The word was sent and Clans and Warbands formed on the Crossroads ready to repel the invaders of the Alliance.

Eventually a small group tested the Crossroads and the Camp Taurajo defenses but fell back to the dwarf held Keep in the Southern Barrens.

The Horde defenders turned into a war party and followed the road to the highly contested keep, eventually claiming some of the ale before the dwarves got mad!

Much thanks to Liavalle of the Obsidian Sun Company and Kadol of the Dwarven Overlords for bringing some fight to the Barrens! See you on the field of battle!
