Things Seem Normal..

Sage tells a Tall Tale and more

One of the first signs that things have returned to normal is a Tall Tales & Epic Fables that sees the return of host Sage Okwaho Redwood. On this occasion, with Chieftain Kaylan Ragehorn absent, the Sage took the opportunity to tell a strange tale about how the High Chieftain came up with names for his Honor Guards, Bluff Watchers and Runners and his "Longwalkers".

And as always amongst the wonderful tales this fine evening on the Bluffs was another moving and heart tearing story by Garble, pictured to the right.

And in May, the Sage promises a special Tall Tales. Stay tuned for more info!

Did we lead with Normal?

More Fel Infections Amongst the Tribes...

The Tribes may be more fortunate than they realize. Case in point, having a Demon Hunter has proved troublesome, but apparently the need to remove fel infections has befallen the Tribes with more frequency than could possibly have been expected.

Luckily, Taharkah Thundersong is on hand to assist in extracting that "yummy" fel.

Artimir Autumnsong, Jinthas Cindersong aid in healing and protection allowing Taharkah to again help heal a Tribesmember.

Perhaps it is time for the Tribes to leave the Fel alone, since Thundersong has her own mission and each time she helps the Redwood's they fall further in debt. What could that possibly cost them in Black Temple?

And a Vile Visitor Leads to Frustrations...

Atop the central tower, a night of cultural differences comes to a head when Sin'dorei and Shu'halo struggle to agree on how to deal with Kinjal Autumnsong, brother to Artimir and higher up in the Silvermoon City hierarchy.

Starting at weekly circle and throughout the succeeding days, the visitor was finding it easy to get under the skin of several of the tribesmembers much to the chagrin of the Chieftain, Sage, and other older more experienced members of the Tribes. It all seems to add up to a very important question. Can the Tribes carry out their mission of uniting the various races of the Horde when they all seem to have such different views on how to best secure the future of the Horde? Despite being seen as one of the most contentious members of the Tribes, you might be surprised what Okwaho believes.

Where are these two going?

Two Chieftains, a Pathfinder, and an Elder

Newly returned to the Tribes Elder Bevhalla Ragehorn seeks a meeting with old ... certainly friends is nearly the opposite of the past experiences shared by some present.

Still, if anyone overheard their conversation, it would be to show one of the most important tenets of Redwood. Family first, despite past or present disagreements.

Will the Tribes be able to assist their former and returned Tribesmember?

On the Homefront

Father Dolan appeals to the fisher in all of us and leads another fun time at the pond on the Bluffs. Or did he just want his belongings back from an ornery catfish?

And look at that fancy Lamplighter Editon Fishing Pole!!!

And speaking of Lamplight Kraa, we had a wonderful time outside of Dalaran one evening... hope there were not too many stubbed toes as guests walked the streets of Dalaran that night.
