The Bluffs Continue to Bring in Visitors...

First Up a Debate on Kodo Hunting

Okwaho Redwood with assistance from Redwood's first Chieftain Ayashe Brightmane attempted to overturn the long time practice of Kodo Hunting. On the other side of the debate, Great Mother Bluesky of the Thunderhoof Tribe and the High Chieftain's Longwalker Kaylan Ragehorn.

The audience had interesting thoughts and provocative questions for both sides and all present evinced a major concern towards the health of the Kodo population as being the determinant if the hunting rites should continue.

One member of the audience remarked this was one of the most peaceful debates they could remember attending.

While many felt the debate well argued, the Sage of Redwood felt the Great Mother and Longwalker had won the debate. The losers of the debate, however, were a small band of Alliance that attempted to attack Thunder Bluff and were soundly defeated by a small force from the audience while still at the Lower Rise lifts.

Next debate July 13: You have joined the Horde, what beliefs do you hold dear that you think the Horde should adopt.

RP101-or advice to younglings

And while we're at it, how to defend the Bluffs

A gathering of younglings looking to look for tips and tricks of how to survive in the Horde. Speakers from several groups sought to share their knowledge and while well received, the speakers also got to show how well the Bluffs can be defended against would be attackers when we come together and not just once, but two times! The Horde also showed they can tell the difference between those trying their best and seeking to learn versus some shameful displays of Trollish behavior, and how to tell the difference from real Trolls! Just remember, if you are new in town, seek out mentors from some well known groups, Thunderhoof Tribe, Bulwark, Kush Lords, and Redwood Tribes just to name a few.

And remember to have fun and collaborate together to bring some wonderful stories to life!

Surprise Visitors to the Bluffs

Is that Father Lyle Brooks?

It certainly is.

Old friends re-unite on the Chieftain's rise. It is unknown what brought the good father for a visit, but Okwaho wasted no time in sharing some ale while Branharak Skybreaker enveloped the good Father in a Shu'halo hug, Lyle soon won't forget.

Despite continued efforts in Northrend, Lyle was looking pretty spry and still able to knock back some of the stronger ales being brewed these days on the Bluffs.

Hope to see Lyle around more often!

EDDIE THE HUMAN!!! NO WAY!

Next up, during another alliance attack on the Bluffs, Azeroth's favorite human came to visit and seemed to rebuke the other Alliance visitors. Rumor has it, Eddie the human tried to keep a low profile, but stunned Bluff's protectors couldn't help but be amazed and in awe!

Why the visit? We may never know, but his command of the Orcish language was enough to break down any barriers and one lucky Bluff defender was given a small gift by the seen here resting human.

Perhaps the rest of the Alliance can learn a lesson from this human and come to the Bluffs in peace next time!

Are there Lamps to Light on the Bluffs?

The Lamplighter of Dalaran has recently been seen wandering the Bluffs at all times of day and night, that is until they have to attend to their duties lighting up Dalaran!

While seen here casually making their way on the Lower Rise, they have also been seen wielding weapons in the defense of the Bluffs. And with the increased attacks recently, the denizens of the Bluffs are extremely grateful.

It is just a shame that one dedicated to lighting the way has to also work double duty protecting the home front. Just another hardworking Shu'halo!

A Green Shu'halo and an Earthquake in STV

What do these two things have in common?

((due to recent security concerns, Branharak was unable to be depicted as noted in the story below. A different subject has been substituted for picture, but the story remains the same))

For a few days, Branharak Skybreaker wandered around the Bluffs, looking a little different... shorter, greener fur, and flatter face. What happened you ask? Reports came in from Stranglethorn Vale that spoke of a goblin made discombobulator ray may have been fired in the vicinity of the Lake Nefertiti and the Goblin mining operation in that area.

Depiction below is substituted for a 1 foot shorter, green, flat faced Bran

Local residents reported seeing a shredder out of control and most hid while earthquakes and other phenomena were felt coming from the area. One compound member mentioned being on duty at Kurzen's outpost and seeing the oil rig crumble into the lake, but was too far to identify any rhyme or reason, just that while that occurred, gunfire was heard... and the sound of an engineered flying machine heading in the direction of Grom'gol Base.

What happened? Grom'gol Base commander Aggro'gosh will only answer For The Horde! A sure sign something is being swept under the centaur furs.

The good news, after a few days, it appears that Redwood's Council Skybreaker is back to his usual ruggedly handsome self!

Yestermoon's News

An Island Adventure

or the Longwalker leads a select team on a special mission

In other news, there seems to be more going on for some of the Redwoods under the leadership of the High Chieftain's Longwalker. Seen here, a small group begins to scout an island south of Booty Bay. The group consisted of Branharak Skybreaker, Ayashe Brightmane, the Highmountain Leidolfr Redwood and the Demon Hunter Taharkah Thundersong under Longwalker Kaylan Ragehorn's direction.

The group were able to avoid a confrontation with a guard ape of gargantuan size to find a south seas pirate with a magical shielding device in his hut. Fire is a great way to smoke someone out and the crew used ale, flame, and force to do just that. Once out, there were multiple images to contend but the crack crew made short work of the pirate. Last seen, heading back to their rowboat, carrying books, a crate, and... something more. The somber group returns home with more questions, but hopefully found what they needed.

Five vs. Thirty-Nine

But what happens when the Longwalker Leads the Defenders Away

Letter from a Concerned Bluff Citizen

I know that I have seen the Horde come together to defend Orgrimmar, but it seems every time I visit the Bluffs we are under attack out here. And truly, I appreciate that we even have five defenders at times, but tonight there were 39 alliance on our bluffs, attacking the High Chieftain. I want to know that our High Chieftain is safe! I want to know I can come to the Bluffs to trade my wares with Sura Wildmane! Though I did enjoy when that brave shaman Skybreaker blew at least nine or ten of them from the Bluffs, and that magnificent Longwalker Ragehorn led a defense that was surprisingly successful despite 8 to 1 odds, but what will we do when this small group is taking care of other business for the High Chieftain.

As seen, Bluff Watchers just stand around while a gnome disguised as a TROLL wanders the Bluffs. The only one doing anything is that Demon Hunter, who for the Love of An'she is always stinking up the Bluffs!

Truly concerned!

Jousting Brings out the Tribes or the JIBES!

The Huntress Hosts the Tribes First Joust Contest

The Argent Tournament Grounds will soon be complete, but The Huntress gained permission to hold a jousting tournament early! The stands were full to capacity excited to see the final battle between Hawk-o-Mania and The Seamstress.

An early injury took out one masked rider and the semi-finals ended quickly! The final rounds took some time, but The Seamstress, Nessima D'Argentine felled her foe twice to take the first Jousting trophy!

Rumors and Tall Tales

*As overheard at Spirits of the Earth
Mother Tavern*

New Host at the Fishing Derby while Father Elias Dolan moonlighting as Hawk-o-Mania!!!

Hold on. The rider is missing, or is that Mrs. D'Argentine fighting from the safety of the stands? Or maybe someone had been drinking!

Is this group of Bluff Defenders ready for anything? How about a Longwalker in a handwoven Nessima D'Argentine dress?

She's a slayer in more ways than one!

Appaloosa's Birthday

The Longwalker takes time out for the orphan!

The Longwalker presents a cake to youngling Appaloosa. As one of the orphans on the Bluff, the Shu'hain tradition of a tribe raising the younglings is still going strong.
