The Gathering Storm

Redwood Tribe stands firm against Alliance forces attempting to wrest control of Arathi Highlands!

Tribe's elite warriors and healers keep Chieftain Abrahof Ragetotem, mighty Shu'halo Shaman safe! Chieftain soothes angry Earth Elementals and raises a mighty Fire Elemental to fend off Alliance militia.

Will Arathi ever know Peace?

Operation STUNTIE STOMP:

Valorheim, Elves of the North and Redwood Tribe retaliate! Alliance incursions into Zandalari lands will be tolerated no longer. Battle hardened Horde strikes at Dwarven Lands meeting fierce resistance from Clan Battlehammer, The Ashen Vale and more. Final clash in Iron Forge resulted in the Horde escaping after incapacitating one Dwarf Ruler before CBH was able to re-muster and rout the invaders from their Hallowed Halls.

Editors Note: Much ale was liberated from Dwarf Inns!

Darkshore Under Assault:

Night Elfs strike back!

Horde forces assaulted by Alliance at Ashwood Depot! Horde sustained numerous casualties in renewed warfare!

Horde Public Relations Department reports high-ranking Elfs raised into Forsaken rank while Blackrock Clan and others met the Alliance resistance head on and held them off long enough for the Warchief's master plan to continue with only limited losses.

Redwood Times reports loss of Val'kyr a hard blow to Horde Forces! New Moon Never Sets!

Chieftain and Tribe prepare to start ritual to raise a Fire Elemental in Arathi Highlands

Menethil Harbor: Alliance prepares to push Horde from the keep!

Horde continues to advance all the way to Ironforge!

The Battle of Alterac – Contributor: Jimirra of The Ashen Vale, Assoc. Press Azeroth

Associated Press Azeroth: December 22, 2018

December 22, 2018 marks the first major battle in this new era of warfare on Emerald Dream, the Battle of Alterac Valley. It was hard fought, but Alliance forces were outmaneuvered, and the United Horde gained a momentous victory.

The opening salvo began as the United Horde blitzed across the Field of Strife meeting Alliance Troops at Stonehearth Outpost. The Alliance were holding but decided on a tactical retreat to reinforce the vulnerable Stonehearth Bunker as it was of high strategic importance.

Capitalizing on this, a small Horde warband moved north to harass and capture Alliance outposts forcing the Alliance to split their forces and defend Dun Baldar. It was a feint of course and the United Horde pushed in to Stonehearth Bunker and ultimately captured the valuable outpost.

Alliance forces now scattered were unable to regroup and skirmishes were breaking out all over the north. The battle came to a head when the United Horde made a final push in to Dun Baldar and broke the remaining defenders.

The war continues. Many heroes fell this night and we honor the efforts of all who shared battle in Alterac Valley.

Disclaimer: Associated Press Azeroth claims no bias and reports eyewitness accounts of the battles of Emerald Dream.

Investigative Reporting

Hidden in Plain Sight

Editor thought he saw an old friend
the other day, but unfortunately,
Nagatsu, the once blind Orc,
continues to travel and spend time in deep meditation. For any that are looking for him, you are invited to send personal ads to the Times, as word has been received that he enjoys the news scrolls immensely.
Editor will continue to attempt to reach out to Nagatsu to clear up whatever mistaken incident has occurred between interested parties.

Only a few cycles of the passage of Mu'sha have gone by since The Redwood Times began in a humble tent in Mulgore. Younglings were handed a few coppers to spread the paper to local inns and taverns. Copies were hand delivered to the Horde Capital, to Zandalari outposts for the Horde troops, and to Dalaran above the Broken Shores by the editor and his mate. Why does the editor mention this? Because the Times now reaches all corners of Azeroth and has grown to three times the size of that first small scroll. The Times vows to follow a path of unbiased favoritism, except for putting Azeroth first and foremost... and K.F.L.

Great Hunt in Mulgore: The Tale of Ripjawn and Rodan

Late November - Mulgore

Hunters from Redwood Tribe, Swiftsilver Cartel, Blackrock Clan, and Valorheim converged on Mulgore upon learning that not one but two mighty beasts had taken up residence in the area around Thunder Bluff. Ripjawn a mighty troll bear from the Amani Tribe and Rodan, a fearsome Pterrodax from Zandalari found their way to Mulgore. Ripjawn was found dwelling and feasting on Harpies and Shu'halo alike just Northwest of Camp Sungraze, while Rodan was said to be desecrating the area of Red Rocks, the Ancestral Burial Grounds. The hunting party split to take on both beasts.

One group was successful. While the other almost perished.

Ripjawn, the great bear, was lured out of his cave by the team of hunters. Though he fought with ferocity, the hunter's cunning overwhelmed the bear, eventually defeating it after a long and drawn out battle.

Rodan, at first thwarted as one of Redwood's healers kept a Blackrock Orc on his feet, targeted the Highmountain Shu'halo with a head butt and then stomped down on his body crushing him into unconsciousness. Rodan, at death's door knocked the Orc unconscious and fled as Trade Princess Sennecca attempted one last strike that just missed.

When Rodan recovers, he will undoubtedly be the target of another fierce battle, but for now he has been chased from the area. Thanks to some orthodox healing measures all hunters survived to hunt again!
