The Real Deal

Spotlight on the Real Denek Southfury

And what the heck does "Oats and Jerky" mean within Redwood Tribe?

Once in awhile, events outside of the game come to Honor Guard Denek Southfury has been a long-time member of Redwood Tribe, and news of his real life escapades has reached our ears!

Within Redwood Tribe, Denek has always been the welcoming friend and the person that takes people under his wing and brings joy, caring, and laughter to any event.

It is Denek that termed the phrase "Oats and Jerky" which is our way of saying congratulations, because when you do something well, you get some extra rations and we're Shu'halo after all

But in the real world, this is Denek and he is no different:

A student, Denek came to the United States this summer for an internship and worked at a boys and girls center as a camp counselor where he stayed for four months until returning home. At the end of his internship, Denek gave back all that he had earned to the center and to the program to help the youths there.

This is what it means to be Redwood!

Denek Southfury and what a great looking transmog. Hopefully, he didn't give fashion advice to the younglings he mentored ;)

The War Continues

The Control of Nazjatar

Contributor: Saller

Ashen Vale Keeps up the pressure

The Ashen Vale continue to keep up the pressure, leading additional alliance forces into Nazjatar and striking at the Horde's new allies in Newhome, along with skirmishes throughout the area.

Where is the Horde Defense? Those giants can not do defend by themselves.

On yet another occasion, the Alliance control the area around Mezzamere and Newhome making it difficult for Horde forces to focus on the real threat... Naga, Ashvane, Azshara, and of course an Old God!

Word is that the Horde military is split between Nazjatar and growing concerns in Thunder Bluff..

Before Heading Out - Boralus

Kill Order Meets in Boralus

Above the harbor, members of Kill Order, an Alliance strike force meet to discuss plans of battle.

The eye catching forces showing off for the Kul Tirans appear rowdy and ready for a fight.

Finally settling into formation, the forces prepare to strike against the Horde.

The Horde awaits you, Kill Order. We may seem pre-occupied trying to fight for Azeroth, but we see you...

Spotlight on The Silver Hand

An Interview with Highlord Velicela

by Lohkawas Wildmane

I spent a pleasant evening with a long time friend, Velicela, a Blood Knight, a citizen of Silvermoon City, a concerned and respected member of the Horde, and someone with concerns to share.

I am sure many that read the Redwood Times know the astute Blood Knight pictured to the left. She has gone on many outings, attended Tall Tales and Epic Fables; broke bread at Leidolfr's (restaurant for those have not tried it) in Orgrimmar on opening night and has been a staunch ally through thick and thin... (I did refrain from any questions concerning the supposed engagement with an Alliance Dwarf).

Vel, as many of her friends call her, told me of the Silverhand's current recruiting drive for the Plagueland Recovery Effort. Slow-going as the recruitment drive has been, especially with continued incursions as Alliance seek passage to attack Silvermoon City. She stated that her own loyalty has come into question as she divides her time protecting the border to her home in Quel'thalas, and her loyalty to the Horde, with the recent withdrawal of Lor'themar's forces from most Horde locations.

In Velicela's words, she will see it all protected, "For it is a Paladin's duty to protect life." If any would like to assist her, send an eagle with mail.

Desolate Disclosure

The Chieftain of Carrion

Designation: Thrones

AS#17 refers to an anomalous entity suspected to be a Tauren proto-Lich. Shu'Halo theology refers to The Blinding; a dark age wherein their species first learned of warfare, deceit and occult mysticism to the dismay of their deity the Earth Mother. While the historical reality of this time period is debatable AS#17-A was determined to be older than AS#27, suggesting AS#17 may predate at least parts of the Kaldorei Empire.

AS#17-A referred to the skull of an unknown bovidae humanoid with notably cervid antlers. AS#17-A was a known cognito hazard capable of inspiring intense feelings of hunger with a 30 foot range. Living humanoids with a BPRS lower than XX would be compelled to place AS#17-A over their own head. Creating an instance of AS#17-B.

AS#17-B was a specimen dominated by AS#17-A that would seek out and consume live humanoids. One documented instance of AS#17-B was noted to have ruptured its own stomach cavity open through ceaseless gorging. The instance continued to feed but notably disregarded the flesh that fell from its new orifice which suggests these instances while undead do not receive any nourishment from humanoid meat.

AS#17-C refers to the anomalous entity released via the destruction of AS#17-A, see Incident Report 6-M.

Apothecary [Redacted]'s Note: This is why we have containment protocols. Not destruction protocols. This is not the first nor last time breather ignorance has waddled us toward doom. Like a child they break what scares them and in doing so make situations worse. It was a skull with a cognito hazard. We've more dangerous objects in Site 011. Now - we're not even sure what we're dealing with. This is why the Department of Inhuman Services is correct and the G.O.L.s are wrong.

The exact nature of AS#17-C is unknown. Initial contact has determined AS#17-C is fluent in ancient Taur-ahe and capable of advanced reanimation and flight. Research is ongoing and reports of all related anomalous activity are being closely followed. Time will determine the nature of AS#17-C. For now, however, the difficulty in finding relevant data suggests that no small effort was expended in attempting to make sure it was deliberately forgotten.

Crime around Azeroth: New Reports as of Sept 8 2019

Gravy Caught Red-Handed

Gravy, barkeep of The Wyvern's Tail was seen making off with kegs of brew from Brewfest Organizers in the Valley of Strength. When questioned, Ray'ma with Brewfest replied, "I'm not sure, mon, why Gravy do tis. But he come back, he lose a limb."

Gravy, visibly shaken and weeping, mumbled about the lack of customers, and lacking tips he just wanted a drink or two... kegs worth.

Interiorer Designer Gone Missing

Marta Pinwilly, one of the first advertisers in the Redwood Times, has not been heard from in over a week. Ms. Pinwilly runs an interior design shop out of Stormwind and has been in high demand since running an ad in the Times.

King Wrynn has sent his own guards to investigate, as Ms. Pinwilly has been responsible for overseeing design changes in the main keep.

Wanted! : New Reports as of August 10 2019

Wanted: For Questioning Editor-in-Chief Lohkawas Wildmane

And not for the reason you think. Apparently, someone in Stormwind wants to question me about Ms. Pinwilly's disappearance... and who has access to information and advertising at the times. Your Majesty, King Wrynn, if you want to advertise, please send a picture and your content. I will be glad to oblige for a friend of High Chieftain Bloodhoof.

Wanted by Goblins: for ... Reasons

First Orgrimmar National Trust recently reported a lost incoming shipment of gold from the Zuldazar region.

Extensive investigations have narrowed down the location of a gang of thieves near a waterfall which may or may not look like the one pictured below. "Send all information to F.O.N.T. for reward of... say 5 gold," Auctioneer Kuvi stated when asked.

Chief's Corner

Greetings,

A few encouraging words to the Horde! Stay on the path of our true values, Strength and Honor! It seems that divisive times are ahead, and overwhelming odds with an Old God on the rise, but we are the Horde! We have faced devastating odds in the past and we are still here. Our enemies underestimate our conviction. That will be their downfall again and again.

With that said, my favorite time of year approaches, Brewfest! Maybe we should just hold a party to end all parties... just in case the Old God wins this time around, or Sylvanas kills us all and raises more Forsaken for her armies.

Ayasha Brightmane's Blog- Part 1

HONORING LIFE'S JOURNEY
by Ayashe Brightmane

In every life there is a journey, a path and a time where we honor the fallen.

Here, I am honoring a fallen human by placing a worthless heirloom on the grave. When you read the quest (see below), you see the widow is angered by his crusade, yet, if you really read it again, you see the emotion of her missing him, wanting him back, and maybe this is her way of calling him to her side a Forsaken.

War is bitter-sweet even in real life. We miss those who have been lost, and yet we are thankful for our freedom.

Description:

Filthy scum! Leaves me for his damn crusade. Because "the Light is the most important thing we have against the threats the undead pose."

Well, what about his children?! What about ME?! Night after night I sat patiently waiting for him...always second to his blasted duty!

Well, witness what "justice" brings you, Ayashe! He's dead and I'm bearing the very thing he was trying to stop!

Take this piece of junk and put it on his tomb at the Sepulcher. I want nothing to do with it anymore... or him!

Progress:

The stone is cold to the touch but has obviously been abused. Trash litters the area; nicks and gashes decorate the relief atop the coffin; and the foliage around the grave has started to grow over the site.

No one cares for whoever is buried here, especially not any victims of the plague.

Completion:

You place the worthless pendant on the grave, and the gemstone within the setting seems to dull noticeably.

As you stand to leave, you look down at the pendant; it lies lifelessly over the hands of the relief sculpted into the top of the coffin. Your thoughts are interrupted by a stiff, cool breeze passing over the Sepulcher. For a moment everything around you is silent.
